

Twin Lotus International School of Healing Arts

The study of Healing Arts is a journey without destination.

There is more than one route to the truth.

Each step along the road of learning reveals separate tracks. Each leading to knowledge unknown or unused, but relevant to the pursuit of excellence. From each track emerge trails, some false, some enlightening.

But, who can know the whole truth without first stumbling along a false trail? One is relevant to the other.

For what is considered false, may now become the truth of the future, as enlightenment reveals a broader picture of our elusive objective; perfection of the Healing Arts.

Likewise, the brilliant light of truth as we perceive it may now be blinding us from the REAL TRUTH; hidden by its comforting reflection. Look further than the last horizon, for this may only be the skyline of hope, an illusion, like the false crest of a mountain beyond which lies the summit of truth; or more false crests. We cannot see them if we look no further.

The journey continues. The truth calls. There can be no destination, BUT there is a magnificent obsession.

Those who think they know the present truths, and disregard the wisdom of the past; imperil all their present search for future light. It may be dimmed by the dogma of arrogance; the future truths then cannot be seen; for as such, they will not be sought.

Copyright Thomas Williams. September 2002.